

Demonstrative and Interrogative Pronouns

A demonstrative pronoun is used to single out one or more persons or things in a sentence. This, that, these, and those are demonstrative pronouns. This and these refer to things that are near. That and those refer to things that are farther away.

Example: These are my CDs, and those belong to my brother.

Interrogative pronouns (who, whom, whoever, whomever, which, what, whatever, and whichever) ask questions.

Example: Whom are you looking for?

Directions: Underline the pronouns in the following sentences, and label them either interrogative (I) or demonstrative (D).

1. How did Arnold get those into the room?
2. Which candidate will win this election?
3. Henry wants these taken to the dumpster over there.
4. Whom did you see at the grocery store?
5. What's that by the drinking fountain?
6. These are the best tennis shoes I've ever seen.
7. Whoever could be responsible for this accident?
8. To whom was the present given?
9. What is the title of this song?
10. Please take these over to the lieutenant.
11. Whatever do you want?
12. That dog belongs to my next door neighbor.
13. Whichever student broke the window needs to confess.
